

The Edge Report — Tracking Sheet

Week of August 22 – August 31, 2026 · 166 games rated · ratings built from 5,966 completed games

This is a record sheet for a paper test, not a slate of wagers. Fill in the result column as games finish. After 200+ rows you will have a real answer about whether these picks are worth money — and it will have cost nothing to find out.

The Chance column is not the model's raw confidence — the model is overconfident, saying 82% where it delivers 74%. Each pick is shown instead at the rate its tier has actually hit in the situation this pick is being made in. That distinction matters most for football: college football's top tier hits 96% from week four onward, but only about 63% of that edge is present in an opening week, when the ratings still describe last season's roster.

A Chance marked * is inherited rather than measured — too few graded picks exist for that exact tier and situation, so the figure is shrunk toward a related one. Treat starred rows as the softest numbers on the sheet.

How to run the test

1. Print this sheet, or keep it open, at the start of the week.
2. As each game finishes, mark Won? with Y or N. Do not skip losses.
3. Record the odds offered in Notes if you can — without them this measures accuracy only, never profit.
4. At week's end, compare each confidence group against its Chance column. That is the whole test.
5. Keep sheets. A verdict needs 200+ rows, not one week.

What this sheet cannot tell you: whether the picks make money. Accuracy and profit are different questions — graded against real prices, these picks returned −5.5% per bet, because the market prices them at least as well as the model does.

Not betting advice. This sheet exists so the model can be judged on evidence rather than on a hunch.
